CHAPTER 2 - PARTY IDEOLOGY

2.1 Justification for the Party's Ideology

The Shikana Frontliners for Unity Party (SFUP) aligns itself with Conservatism, which is a far right-wing nationalist philosophy born from a deeply-rooted power that is vested on the people and their fundamental push to preserve our traditional values and social order and opposing sudden radical changes to established government and social systems so as to preserve a morally stable, cohesive and just society.

The party recognizes Kenya as a product of the anti-colonial struggle and the broader independence movement that led to the end of British rule. This historical context, marked by conflict, social upheaval, and injustice, gave rise to an intensified search for our Nation's Consciousness - manifested through National Identity, National Autonomy, National Pride and National Unity. Patriotism and loyalty to the Republic of Kenya holds the view that for Kenya to progress and realize the aspirations of citizens' lives, effective leadership should be at the core of building robust institutional frameworks and systems.

2.2 Alignment of Party Name with the Party Ideology

The “Shikana Frontliners for Unity Party (SFUP)” is not merely a name - it is a declaration of purpose and ideology. SFUP’s name reinforces its mission to safeguard Kenya’s identity, promote responsible leadership, and uphold conservative principles that prioritize stability, sovereignty, patriotism and cultural continuity.

Shikana - Unity through Shared Values

Derived from Swahili, “Shikana” means “Unite”, symbolizing the party’s central commitment to National Unity, Social Cohesion, and Collective Responsibility. This aligns with conservative ideals that prioritize Social Order, Stability, and Moral Continuity. It also signifies the patriotic solidarity forged during Kenya’s anti-colonial struggle - invoking a sense of national consciousness rooted in shared history and destiny.

Frontliners - The People as Pillars of the Nation

“Frontliners” represents “Ordinary Kenyan Citizens”, particularly the working class and nation-builders. This term reflects the party’s belief in power vested in the people, consistent with right-wing populist nationalism. It affirms that the people are not only beneficiaries of national progress but also its defenders, tasked with upholding Kenya’s moral fabric, traditional values, and cultural sovereignty.

Unity - A Cohesive and Just Society

The term “Unity” reinforces the party’s goal of building a morally grounded, stable, and inclusive nation. It emphasizes oneness through shared national values, as opposed to liberal pluralism or divisive radical reforms. This favours the strengthening of institutions, historical and constitutional grounding, patriotism, and principled governance.

2.3 Alignment of Party Values, Principles, Objectives with Ideology

SFUP’s foundational values such as limited government, sovereignty of the people, respect for the rule of law, national loyalty, strong families, and individual responsibility - reflect core tenets of conservatism. By upholding the supremacy of the Constitution, personal freedoms, and informed choice, SFUP reinforces the conservative belief in constitutional authority, legal order, and individual agency.

The party's principles further solidify its ideological stance by advocating for institutional stability, ethical leadership, and fiscal prudence. SFUP calls for loyalty to a sovereign and united Kenya, transparent governance, and prudent economic stewardship, all of which echo the conservative emphasis on national cohesion and responsible governance. The party's approach to devolution - ensuring local representation while maintaining national unity, demonstrates a conservative balancing act between decentralization and central authority.

Operationally, SFUP translates its conservative ideals into actionable objectives aimed at fostering a just and prosperous nation. These include strengthening grassroots participation, promoting family and community values, encouraging a market-driven economy with social safeguards, and ensuring inclusive but merit-based access to public office. By embedding conservative principles into its governance agenda - ranging from electoral integrity to national sovereignty - the party positions itself as a right-leaning force that seeks gradual, value-driven development anchored in Kenya's historical legacy and national identity. The party supports reforms that are gradual and constitutionally anchored, focusing on the empowerment of citizens, respect for cultural heritage, and protection of Kenya's sovereignty.

2.4 Alignment of Party Symbol and Colours with Party Ideology

The Shikana Frontliners for Unity Party (SFUP) has intentionally used its party symbols and colours as a visual articulation of its conservative, right-wing nationalist ideology. Each component - the mountain deer, the mountain, and the rings of colour are described as follows:

Mountain Deer: A Conservative Emblem of Purposeful Leadership

The mountain deer, known for its grace, intelligence, and calm disposition, symbolizes leadership through wisdom, restraint, and spiritual depth. The mountain further amplifies these values. It tells the story of a nation climbing toward prosperity through value-based leadership, unity in diversity, and unyielding loyalty to tradition and country. The ascent up the mountain metaphorically reflects Kenya's post-colonial journey: not through radical upheaval, but through persistence, unity, and strong institutions. Together, the deer and mountain embody SFUP's call for value-driven governance, where resilience and tradition serve as the foundations for national development and cohesion. Anchored by the mountain deer and enveloped in symbolically rich colours it embodies the spirit of Kenyan conservatism: strong, stable, morally grounded leadership, and resistant to radicalism. The imagery and meaning coalesce into a singular message: Kenya's future must be built on the enduring strength of its past.

The Rings of Colour: Conservative Ideological Meanings

Royal Blue Inner Ring

Symbolizes: Faith, Renewal, Prosperity, Unity, and Security

Correlates with SFUP's ideology as it emphasizes on: Patriotism and Loyalty to Kenya, Cohesive National Identity, Adaptability without abandoning tradition

This inner ring reflects conservatism's core belief in cultural continuity, cautious adaptation, and institutional harmony, rejecting erratic reform in favour of purposeful national evolution.

Golden Brown Middle Band

Symbolizes: Authenticity, Loyalty, Nurturing Leadership, and Moral Grounding

Correlates with SFUP's ideology as it emphasizes on:

Family-Centered Social Order, Integrity in Governance, National Values and Community Care

This band is emblematic of the conservative worldview that strong families and ethical leadership are the bedrock of a stable and just society.

Black Outer Ring

Symbolizes: Authority, Cultural Depth, Resilience, and Protection

Represents SFUP's dedication to:

National sovereignty and defense, Cultural preservation, Resistance to external ideological pressures

Acting as a protective outer layer, the black ring signals a strong, secure national identity safeguarded against destabilizing forces, reinforcing the party's nationalist stance.

Ideological Integration: Symbolism as Governance Philosophy

Every symbol and colour in SFUP Logo resonate with its conservative beliefs:

Preservation of moral and cultural traditions, Strength through unity, not fragmentation, Steady governance grounded in ethical leadership, Resilience and self-determination in national development, Institutional loyalty over revolutionary change

2.5 Alignment of the Slogan with SFUP's Ideology

The SFUP's slogan “Truth, Always, Conquers” (Latin: Veritas, Lux et Lex, Vincit) is a Conservative Mantra which embodies SFUP's ideological right-wing nationalist commitment to unchanging moral absolutes and truths, constitutional fidelity, institutional integrity, peace and justice, traditional values, and ethical governance. Through this slogan, SFUP affirms that only by anchoring society in eternal truths can the country withstand ideological decay and build a strong, sovereign future. Each part of the slogan is deeply symbolic of SFUP's ideological DNA:

“Truth” = Eternal Moral Standards, Traditional Values, National and Spiritual Integrity: “Always” = Enduring and timelessness of conservative principles across generations: “Conquers” = Victory of Order, Culture, and Lawful Governance over radicalism and chaos

Therefore, the slogan is a statement of ideological confidence - a belief that truth, when upheld, guarantees societal stability, moral justice, and national unity.

CHAPTER 3 - LEGAL FRAMEWORK AND COMPLIANCE

3.1 The Constitution of the Party

SFUP's laws require that all party positions at all levels should be decided by regular internal party elections held at branch, county as well as national party conventions. SFUP has a nomination and election rules aligned to the provisions of its constitution that all party members should adhere to when participating in any campaigns and election. The members shall elect from among themselves their leaders to represent them in governing bodies and committees, which are - on the local or county and national level. Similarly, the candidates for political appointments and public offices (for example, candidates for parliamentarian seats, governor, senators, or president of the country) should also be legitimized by internal party elections and ratified by the supreme organs of the party.

3.2 The Constitution of Kenya

The Constitution is the supreme law of the land. It is the source of all authority in the country. Under Article 81 every Kenyan has an equal right to elect their leaders in the general representative bodies and also can stand for election as a member of those bodies, subject to the limitations and exceptions prescribed by Act of Parliament. In a parliamentary democracy, citizens elect their representatives through various political parties. By taking part in a by- or general election, SFUP hopes to promote the interests of voters by getting as many of party members as possible into all the representative bodies, like parliament or a county assembly or other government institutions.

3.3 The Political Parties Act

The 2011 Political Parties Act is the main law that governs parties in the country. Under the terms of the Political Parties Act, anyone in Kenya can join a political party or set up a new one so that they are able to vote for the candidates of their choice. This way, they are able to influence government policy. Anyone who want to become Members of Parliament or County Assembly will join the party and together campaign for its ideas. The party will select people who are capable of caring for the country and its people. The members of the National Assembly, the Senate and the County Assembly are elected directly by the Kenyan voters. The voters will express their political opinion by voting for them and the party.

3.4 The Elections Act and IEBC Acts

These legislations govern the conduct of elections in the country. Under the terms of the Elections Act, SFUP will take part in all the elections by submitting a list of candidates and adhering to the election procedures and the necessary preparations are prescribed therein. The Constitution grants every Kenyan citizen aged 18 or over the right to vote, as well as the right to stand for elections. The mandate of the Independent Elections and Boundaries Commission (IEBC) includes the continuous registration of voters and revision of the voter's roll, the delimitation of constituencies and wards, the regulation of political parties process, the settlement of electoral disputes, the registration of candidates for elections, voter education, the facilitation of the observation, monitoring and evaluation of elections, the regulation of money spent by a candidate or party in respect of any election, the development of a code of conduct for candidates and parties, and the monitoring of compliance with legislation on nomination of candidates by parties.

CHAPTER 4 - POLICY DEVELOPMENT THEMES (PDT)

SFUP proposes a set of policy strategies that require us to have a much closer collective "ear to the ground" and increase the extent to which we listen to the "cries from the heart" of people. The struggle against poverty, including the race to achieve the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and the implementation of effective Poverty Reduction Strategies (PRS), requires mobilising and harnessing all possible national and global capacities and resources. The Party's mission policy actions will be motivated by short- medium- and long-term goals designed to protect our country's valuable national and natural resources.

4.1 Theme 1: Social Aspirations:

Nurturing Our Greatest Asset and Delivering High Quality of Social Life;

The first thematic focus centres on Social Growth and Development, which emphasizes on the need for a transformative framework that promotes equal opportunities, social justice, and the empowerment of all Kenyans. Kenya must eliminate the exploitation of the poor, unlock its vast human resource potential, and restore citizens' dignity through inclusive and people-centered development. SFUP's aims to build inclusive partnerships across society, reduce inequality, and revitalize the economy by returning power to the people. This theme includes the following Social Aspirations:

Education: Implement policies for accessible and quality education at all levels, including vocational training and adult education programs.

Healthcare: Improve healthcare access and affordability through universal health coverage, expanded primary care facilities, and investments in public health programs.

Social Welfare: Strengthen social safety nets by expanding social assistance programs, providing support for vulnerable populations (children, elderly, disabled), and promoting social inclusion.

4.2 Theme 2: Economic Aspirations:

Structural Economic Transformation by Creating a Conducive Environment for Business, Trade and Investment;

The second thematic focus centres on Structural Economic Transformation, addressing the critical pillars of economic planning and infrastructure development. To fully leverage on Kenya's strengths and unlock future potential, this theme is designed to tackle long-standing challenges such as low levels of industrialization, inadequate physical infrastructure, weak intersectoral linkages, and inefficiencies in agricultural structuring and productivity. Central to this agenda is the urgent need to address underemployment by aligning skilled workforce with the demands of a productive labour market, particularly by integrating youth into the active economy. This theme includes the following Economic Aspirations:

Economic Growth: Promote sustainable and inclusive economic growth by investing in infrastructure, supporting key sectors (e.g., agriculture, manufacturing, tourism), and fostering innovation and entrepreneurship.

Job Creation: Implement policies to create decent jobs, address youth unemployment, and support the informal sector.

Trade and Investment: Facilitate trade and attract foreign investment through supportive policies and infrastructure development.

Fiscal Responsibility: Manage public finances responsibly, control public debt, and ensure efficient and transparent public spending.

Financial Inclusion: Expand access to financial services, promote microfinance, and support the growth of small and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs).

4.3 Theme 3: Governance Aspirations:

Delivering Good Governance and improved Institutional Frameworks;

The third thematic focus centres on the critical role of good governance and accountability in building a fair and responsive leadership framework ranging from national offices to village structures. SFUP prioritizes the welfare of communities over personal interests, advocating for inclusive, transparent, and participatory governance that reflects the voices and needs of all Kenyans. Ultimately, the message is a rejection of corrupt practices, poor governance, and undemocratic tendencies and restore public trust through reforms, protect individual rights, and create a governance system. This theme includes the following Governance Aspirations:

Rule of Law: Strengthen the rule of law, ensure an independent judiciary, and promote judicial reforms.

Good Governance: Promote transparency, accountability, and citizen participation in governance.

Devolution: Implement effective decentralization policies, empower local governments, and promote citizen engagement in local decision-making.

Anti-Corruption: Implement robust anti-corruption measures, strengthen institutions responsible for combating corruption, and promote ethical conduct in public service.

Public Service Reform: Improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the public service through training, performance management, and merit-based recruitment.

CHAPTER 5 - IMPLEMENTATION STRATEGIES

5.1 Key Implementation Strategies:

The Shikana Frontliners for Unity Party (SFUP) is firmly committed to implementing policies and programmes that contribute to the construction of a more equitable and prosperous Kenya. The party Manifesto has been designed and developed with a strong emphasis on feasibility, inclusivity, and impact. To support this effort, SFUP will establish sub-committees for various sectors and policy areas, composed of relevant stakeholders, tasked with developing detailed implementation plans, including cost estimates and timelines. The objective is to ensure that, upon receiving a mandate from the electorate, SFUP is equipped with ready-to-execute plans capable of advancing its goals of poverty eradication, reduced inequality, and lower unemployment rates.

Strategic Planning: Develop a comprehensive strategic plan with clear goals, objectives, and timelines for each aspiration.

Resource Allocation: Allocate adequate financial and human resources to implement the identified policies and programs.

Stakeholder Engagement: Involve relevant stakeholders, including civil society organizations, the private sector, and citizens, in the implementation process.

Monitoring and Evaluation: Establish robust monitoring and evaluation mechanisms to track progress, identify challenges, and make necessary adjustments.

Capacity Building: Invest in capacity building initiatives to strengthen the capacity of government agencies and other stakeholders to implement the manifesto.

Public Awareness: Conduct public awareness campaigns to inform citizens about the manifesto and its implementation, and to foster public support.

Policy Coherence: Ensure that all policies are coherent and consistent with the overall goals of the manifesto.

Review and Revision: Regularly review and revise the manifesto and its implementation strategies to adapt to changing circumstances and emerging challenges.

5.2 Strategic Policy Implementation Timeframes (SPITs)

By prioritizing the needs of the people and being committed to ends rather than means, we can meet the challenges of economic decline and social alienation that threaten the country. To realise the party's mission, the Three-Phase Strategic Policy Implementation Timeframe include:

1. Short Term - Baseline Development Phase: 1-2 Year (1st SPIT);
2. Medium Term – Progress Measurement Phase: 3-5 Years (2nd SPIT);
3. Long Term - Growth Realization Phase: 5+ Years (3rd SPIT).

SFUP's approach will be organized around the three themes three planning and implementation stages that will be used throughout the planned periods:

1. Short Term: The phase of transition to a new model of economic growth.

The task of transitioning from the methods of delivery used by the current regimes to a new economic model, will be based on investments and development bound to be initiated in our first term in office.

The immediate priority is to conduct a timely assessment and identify any constraints that must be addressed. At this stage, we will identify key considerations to form the basis of a rapid growth of industries, agriculture and the financial sector, and massive creation of new high-performance enterprises and access to new markets for commodities produced in Kenya. This will also ensure we have an effective change in the institutional mechanisms that allows for attracting investments in the real sector of the economy and infrastructure. The new growth model will lead to a significant increase in the share of employment (both formal and informal) and ensure the expansion of the revenue base. The implementation of the Party's economic model will be in tandem with the economic and social opportunities available in the country and globally. To improve economic policy and institutional framework during this period, SFUP's focus will be directed at:

- a) Organize the necessary research and preparatory work to lay a foundation for the accelerated development of the wards and constituencies in the whole country.
- b) The framework of sectoral and regional development programs, and give particular attention to developing key industries such as mining, energy (petroleum and electricity), transport, agriculture and fisheries, arts and culture, telecommunications industry, food and light industry, building materials industry, tourism and the financial sector and streamline the natural resources sector and development of new financial capabilities and trade policies.
- c) Ensuring we improve the quality of existing economic activities, expand and diversify revenue generation sources. Given the current needs, this stage of development will setup new mechanisms of modernizing the governance and management systems.

2. Medium- Term: The phase of accelerated private sector investments.

At this stage, we will improve on the economic activities identified in the baseline in order to increase the momentum of investments in the real sectors. We shall witness the real effect of a diversified economy and achieve investment growth through exploiting the benefits of developing home-grown technological inventions and solutions. All relevant stakeholders will have to continually mobilise their resources to ensure that we are ready for a revolutionary economic take-off. This phase will be characterized by the creation of a number of new jobs at a rate of least 20% annually. The construction of main roads and all access/feeder roads will be completed, and opportunities improved in the transportation system.

3. Long-Term: The phase of accelerated industrialization and expansion.

Within this context, we will intensify local production to increase the development of the value-add industries in new frontiers of global competition. The faster the growth of public and private investments, the better for modernization of our social spheres and accelerated development in all sectors and regions. The main focus being to prioritize strategies associated with the provision of high standards of human welfare, and improving the quality of life in all counties. In order to ensure this is achieved, all local, sectoral and regional management bodies will be responsible for the coordination and implementation of all SFUP government development strategies.

5.3 Monitoring and Evaluation

The main purpose of monitoring and evaluation (M & E) is to continue the intensification process and ensuring we achieve the goals and objectives set in our manifesto. The need for the formation of several levels of monitoring is obvious for any local project / program (to compare planned outcomes with actual outcomes), at the sector level (to monitor the specific sectoral indicators), at the regional level (to assess the regional development indicators), at the national level (to consolidate results from all levels). An Annual Performance-Monitoring Framework (APMF) will be deployed to systematically track and report on actual development progress towards attaining our desired goals and outcomes. At operational level, our plans, programmes, projects and activities we will have sound, robust criteria and data that aligns to every goal, strategy and actions.

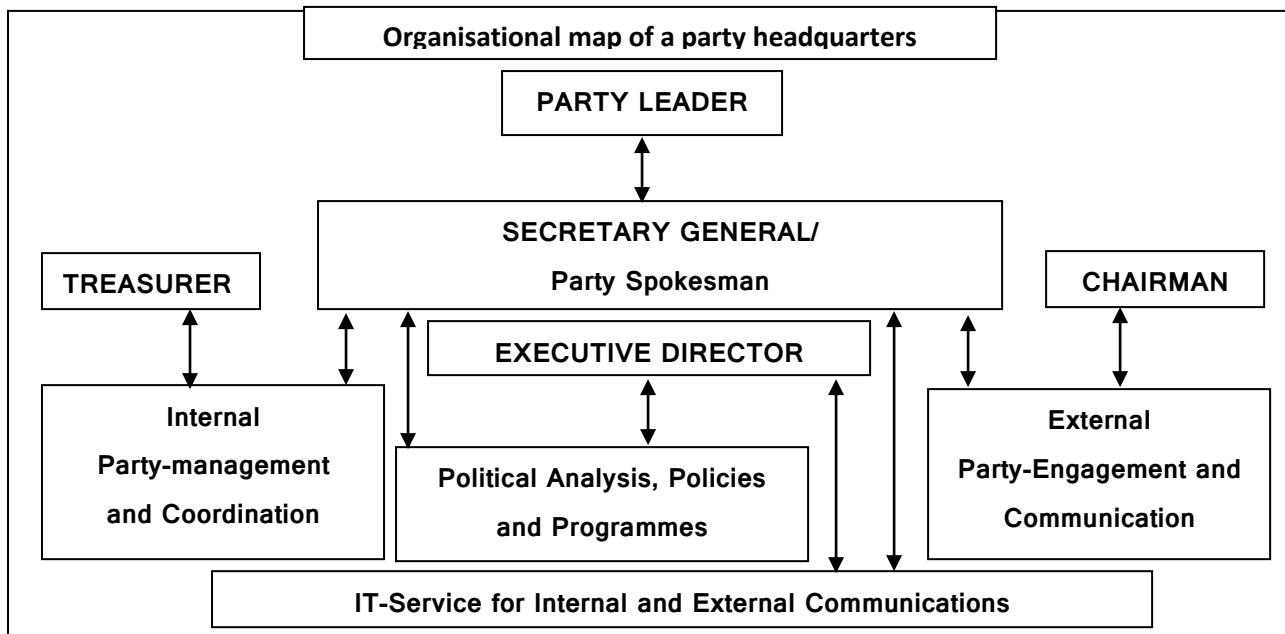

5.4 Risk Management

Risk management is as much about identifying opportunities as avoiding or mitigating losses. There are factors that can adversely affect the successful implementation of SFUP's plans. Through risk management initiatives we are able to identify real threats and facilitate prompt remedial action. It is reasonable to assume that during the entire implementation period, the processes, would be subjected to the changing internal and external conditions that could potentially cause deviations from our strategic directions, which in turn hamper the achievement of our desired outcomes. The range and complexity of risk issues relating to implementation capacity, may result from the changes in political administrations and economic landscape over the period of implementation which complicates decision making and accurate predictions for the performance of the economy. A unified, whole-of-people approach guarantees effective coordination for successful realisation of our desired vision.

CHAPTER 6 - IDEOLOGY COMMUNICATION AND DISSEMINATION STRATEGY

6.1 Communication Strategy

The party headquarters is at the top of the party organisation and is the base for the Party leader, the National Executive Committee and the Party secretariat. The office has several “technical” departments that concentrate on certain issues to prepare the party’s positions on actual themes of political debates and provide party members and representatives with information and arguments.

An understanding of our overall communication strategies as spearheaded by the party leader, party organs and agreed by all elected and appointed leaders and officials of the party. It should be about building alliances between individuals and groups with similar interests and goals, maintain relationships and to coordinate activities. All members and stakeholder will get involved in workshops, in-country development missions, intra-party engagements and activities whose discussions and outputs are designed to greatly help us identify and inform the production of policies that are critical for service delivery and growth. These outcomes must align with the objects of the party constitutions and should therefore form in large part our communication and dissemination content. The party should be led professionally and equipped with modern techniques of communication. In addition, a common set of dissemination materials and media will be made available, a specific strategy will be implemented, and active involvement of all party participants will be required.

Organizing Effective Events

Organizing our own events will also be a great way to influence the kind of coverage we want for our campaign. The organisation of mass events like congresses and seminars are an important tool to deepen the contact with our members, representatives of social organisation and local, regional and national opinion leaders. Besides that, media events can generate press coverage as they involve site visits to locations (schools, health centers, factories, parks) to highlight certain issues, campaign activities (rallies, meetings, door-to-door canvassing), speeches, and debates.

6.2 Develop a Media strategy

The external communication with the public will comprise everything on offer by the party to mass using modern communication and political marketing instruments. A strategic media plan targeting our voters and a well-run party campaign will benefit the party greatly by getting the party positive coverage through the media, in communicating our message to the people. Therefore, we will use these plans to define all our communication and dissemination activities and to provide a roadmap for any upcoming actions and events. Developing good working relationships with the media will ensure we have a more, and better, coverage of our campaign. By understanding reporters' needs and making sure we are prepared to respond to them, means we provide the media with what they need to cover our stories.

Media Toolkit

SFUP will put together a media toolkit, which is an assembly of all the basic documents and pieces of information needed whenever the party engage with the media throughout the party campaigns. Here are the elements that make up a complete media toolkit:

Message Packs: Party messages will be the basis for all of party communications and used as convenient reference point for drafting press releases, speeches and statements throughout all party campaign and to ensure that the language and tone used is consistent. Unlike the press pack, which will be distributed to reporters and potential supporters, the message pack is a private, internal set of documents designed only for SFUP's campaign team's use. Our message pack should include:

- The campaign's basic message written out → one to four sentences long
- The campaign or candidate's basic stump speech → one-minute version
- The campaign or candidate's basic stump speech → five-minute version

Campaign talking points or prepared "Questions and Answers," are the answers that everyone on the campaign should give to typical questions expected to be asked by the media. The presence of our party leaders in television talk shows and the radio, are other important tools at the disposal of the party for communication.

Press Packs: Regular press releases and press conferences, and publication of bulletins and positions are the basics for the party communication. There are a few items the party campaign will prepare and put together as press packs that will be useful for all media outlets. Press packs include core information about the campaign, the party and/or its candidates, which members of the press can refer to throughout the campaign or election no matter what the issue or event is that they are covering. The press pack will also be used by our bloggers, reporters and editors when we launch party campaigns. Press packs will also be available at all Party campaign's events where the media is invited. These packs are also great to leave behind when meeting with party leaders, prominent potential supporters and other community leaders. We will post links to the documents in the press pack on the party website so that journalists can access this information at any time.

Press Release: A press release is a short document that communicates news from the campaign quickly to many news outlets. It always answers the following questions: Who is the subject of the story? What is happening? Where is it happening? When is it happening? Why is this so important? A press release should usually fit onto one page. Any additional information for reporters, such as research data or background information, will have a separate fact sheet to accompany the press release.

6.3 Digital Marketing Strategy

Since online is primarily used by young people, it's a great platform for energizing our voter demographics typically interested in SFUP politics. One of the most effective ways to generate support online is to build an online strategy for the party or the party candidates. Some indicative digital marketing strategies include party branding and advertising (through selling of or distribution of party merchandise), personal branding, online campaigning, mobile phone canvassing, and celebrity endorsements. Eventually, the objective is to connect with thousands-or, millions of potential voters using status updates and messages that create a favorable image in the minds of the target audience.

Website

A website is useful as people can obtain valuable party information that can convince them to vote in favor. The internet nowadays is relevant for modern communication and so the party user-friendly website will be used as the main digital promotion and marketing tool and source for communication and permanently actualized.

Social Media Marketing

The emergence of social media platforms has greatly broadened the scope and potential of strategic communication. SFUP will have 13 different regional party branches which will each have their own social media platforms to communicate issues of local or regional relevance all linked up with the main party social media platform. The top social media platforms that the party will use to engage more frequently and directly with their target audiences include:

Facebook

Building up a facebook page will help to: Highlight party Milestones, Share Party goals and accomplishments directly with voters, Subscribe to live event, Advertising, Data analysis, and Research.

X (former Twitter)

Twitter is where all the live action is. Be it the latest news, latest brands, latest products, personality or anything that might see the light of the day, first hits on twitter. The party will reach out to the people and discuss issues enough to make it a trend everywhere e.g. through daily tweeting, using proper Hashtag for the party and our politicians and campaign creation.

YouTube

Visual platforms like YouTube will be used to disseminate the messages of the party. Therefore, SFUP will create a YouTube channel for party, upload party event videos and post video Ads.
